Dr. Travis J. Bristol, a former high school English teacher in New York City public schools and teacher educator with the Boston Teacher Residency, is an Assistant Professor at Boston University. His research interests focus on the practices that support teacher and student learning and the policies that enable and constrain teacher workplace experiences and retention.

SPECIAL EVENTS:

1. Out of Many, One: The Challenge, Promise, and Hope for Increasing the Racial/Ethnic Diversity in America’s Teaching Force
   October 19: 6:00 – 8:00 pm, University Hall – 7th Floor Conference Center
   Open to the Public- Keynote Address outlining the need for Teachers of Color to Enrich our Communities. Overview of the research and what we now know is best for ALL students in America, followed by Q/A session. University faculty and students are encouraged to attend. Registration is required.

2. Policy and Practice Recommendations for Recruiting, Supporting, and Retaining Teachers of Color
   October 20: 9:00 – 11:00 am, University Hall, ADP Center – Room 1143
   Discussion with school districts and administrators on recruiting and retaining teachers and leaders of color. Policy and practice implications at the district level. University faculty welcome. Registration is required.

3. Organizing for Diversity: Recruiting and Retaining a More Diverse Student Body
   October 20: 3:30 – 5:00 pm, University Hall, ADP Center – Room 1142
   A discussion with students and higher education personnel. How should higher education recruit and retain strong and creative students of color? Registration is required.

To see Dr. Bristol speak at Stanford University:
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=c123SSqIvkY

Sponsored By: Center of Pedagogy, Montclair State University Network for Educational Renewal, Teacher Education Advocacy Center, Education Opportunity Fund, Holocaust, Genocide, and Human Rights Education Project, Student Development and Campus Life, The Office of Equity and Diversity